Class name	Costs of a $10,000 investment	Costs paid as a percentage of a $10,000 investment
Institutional Shares	$58	0.54%

How did the Fund perform last year?

- U.S. equities broadly moved higher as the reporting period progressed, resulting in significant positive returns across most market segments.
- Fears of a U.S. recession waned while major overseas economies returned to positive growth.
- Signs of easing inflation led to expectations that the U.S. Federal Reserve and other leading central banks were poised to reduce interest rates, leading growth-oriented stocks to outperform value stocks.

What contributed to performance?

The Fund’s best performing sectors included financials, information technology and industrials. In financials, selection decisions in banks and insurance were strong contributors to absolute performance. In information technology, the Fund’s investments in technology, hardware, storage and peripherals contributed significantly to performance. In industrials, positioning in aerospace and defense contributed meaningfully.

What detracted from performance?

At the sector level, exposure to healthcare and consumer staples weighed most heavily on the Fund’s return. Healthcare equipment and supplies and pharmaceuticals holdings also detracted. Weak performance in consumer staples was driven by holdings in consumer staples distribution and retail as well as in food products. Other challenging areas in the portfolio included the household durables and containers and packaging industries.
